

The Happy Christmas Tree Album Cover ~ by Terry White

On The Twelfth Day Of Havel's,
My True Love Is The Rotary Skip Blade

Make the Bookmark

1. Start with a piece of fabric with fusible web applied and the paper backing torn off. In this case, I used the leftovers from the labels.

2. Fold the fabric onto itself with fused sides together. This creates a two-sided fabric with lots of body. The double fusing adds strength to the piece.

The Happy Christmas Tree Album Cover ~ by Terry White

On The Twelfth Day Of Havel's,
My True Love Is The Rotary Skip Blade

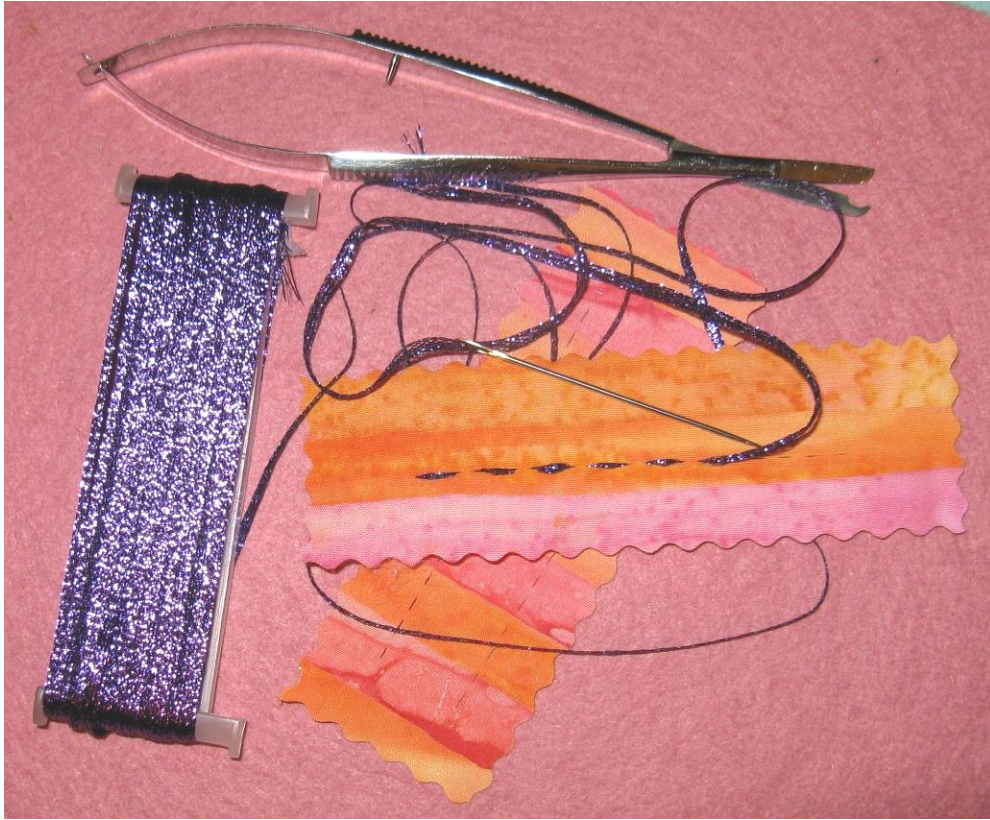

3. After cutting the piece into a rectangle using the Rotary Pinking Blade, I used the Rotary Skip Blade to perforate two lines down the center of the bookmark.

You can see the perforations when I pull the fabric a little. This won't fray; the double fusing strengthens the fabric. So, this technique has all kinds of applications!

The Happy Christmas Tree Album Cover ~ by Terry White

On The Twelfth Day Of Havel's,
My True Love Is The Rotary Skip Blade

4. Use a big tapestry needle to thread purple metallic ribbon through the perforations.

5. Cut two stars from fabric with fusible web on it. Don't fuse them before cutting them out.

The Happy Christmas Tree Album Cover ~ by Terry White

On The Twelfth Day Of Havel's,
My True Love Is The Rotary Skip Blade

6. Place purple ribbon on top of a green star (fusible side up). Place the other star on top, then iron, fusing the purple ribbon between the green star shapes.

7. Do the same for the purple stars.

